The initiative has introduced modern practices to reduce, reuse and recycle solid waste in the communities along the Black Sea basin rivers in Georgia and the Republic of Moldova. In particular, the project partners have built the first composting center in western Georgia, have installed plastic waste separation containers and have established recycling centers for electrical waste and electronic equipment. At the same time, they have launched a broad educational programme concerning rivers and sea protection, and they are organising multiple clean-up events in the communities located along the rivers. The final aim is to reduce river and marine litter in the Black Sea basin, introducing modern waste management practices and increasing the environmental awareness of the citizens.
