Thanks to universities, research and innovation can foster business opportunities. The cooperation of academic institutions provided by the RoUATADRI project aims at increasing the innovative action of engineering specialties students, researchers and local entrepreneurs. The project helps to equip the Center of Innovation Development (CID) with modern technologies and tools, enabling researchers and students to create mockups and prototypes of their projects and ensuring access to modern technologies on both sides of the border. The database, generated by the project, allows companies to register their project ideas and needs, connecting universities with economic actors.
