The project aims at creating sustainable emergency structures by training 630 people (among university students and staff) to provide first-aid emergency interventions and by developing a set of logistic resources to facilitate access to first-rate health services. To achieve this objective, 60 information and communicating sessions are carried out, 1000 first aid guides are distributed, and a trainers' network to offer first aid intervention is created. The two partner institutions benefit also of 80 kits for first aid purpose (defibrillator and first aid pack).
