The project supports the research on the health status of cultured fish, in order to ensure a more efficient production in the aquaculture systems of the Prut river basin. “Teamup HealthyFish” project partners are working on workshops and training activities for researchers, fish farmers, local public authorities and educational institutions. A guide will be produced in Romanian, describing the innovations in fish disease prevention and treatment, water quality management and sustainable fish farming practices. Moreover, by opening a dialogue between fish farmers and public authorities, the project is contributing to the development of national programmes for the improvement of the sector.
